

African swine fever

HEY! Are you packing pork?

African swine fever (ASF) is on our doorstep.
Don't bring meat and animal products into Australia.

African swine fever (ASF) is a contagious viral disease of pigs that's spreading rapidly and will devastate our pork industry if it gets into Australia.

ASF is not a danger to human health or food safety.

The disease is spread by direct contact with infected pigs, contaminated vehicles, equipment or clothing and by feeding infected swill or meat scraps to pigs.

It's vital that we keep ASF out of Australia and we need your help. Do your bit to protect Australia by:

Being a responsible traveller.

Australia has strict biosecurity restrictions on meat and animal products entering the country.

- Don't bring meat or animal products into Australia.
- Declare all products specified on your incoming passenger card.
- If you've been visiting farms or hiking you also need to declare on entry.

If you don't declare goods, such as meat or animal products, you could be fined.

Pull the pork, protect our border from ASF.
