

Northern Territory Charter of Victims' Rights

The Northern Territory Government puts the rights of victims first, by ensuring they have a stronger voice in our justice system with better protections and access to vital services.

The Charter of Victims Rights clearly directs that every reasonable resource will be used to support the safety and welfare of victims, their families and their property.

Access to simple and quick services in a coordinated and respectful manner is critical to victims of crime and their families. Providing opportunities for victims to be more involved in the justice process also acknowledges the interests of victims of crime and their integral role in the criminal justice system.

The Northern Territory Government's key principles:

1. Victims' rights are a priority.
2. The safety and welfare of victims, their families and their property is our number one concern.
3. Every reasonable resource will be used to support victims.
4. Access to services will be simple, quick, coordinated and respectful.
5. Victims have a right to be heard by the justice system.

Northern Territory Charter of Victims' Rights

The Northern Territory Government supports victims of crime. This Charter identifies victims' rights in the justice system and states to all government agencies and contracted service providers engaged with victims how they must provide their services and contact with victims. All processes are to be quick, fair, cost-effective and accessible.

Courtesy, compassion and respect

We will treat you with courtesy, compassion and respect.

We will treat you in a way that is trauma-informed and promotes cultural safety.

Your needs

Your needs are important. This includes Aboriginal or cultural background, location, sex or gender identity or sexual orientation, language and literacy, disability, religion and age.

Protecting your identity

We will keep your address and contact details confidential, except for when we are legally required to disclose information. If this happens, we will tell you what information we are disclosing and why we are disclosing it.

Protecting you from the accused

We will tell you at the earliest opportunity about how you can be legally protected against violence and intimidation by the accused.

The Police and Courts will consider you and your family's personal protection when bail applications are decided.

You will be protected from unnecessary contact with the accused and defence witnesses during hearings. This can include vulnerable witnesses giving evidence by closed circuit television or from behind a screen, and with a support person.

Information about services and support

We will tell you at the earliest opportunity about welfare, counselling, health, medical, legal services and support, and financial assistance you can access, as well as any limitations that might apply.

Information about the investigation of the crime

If you want, the Police will tell you about the progress of the investigation, unless sharing this information could jeopardise its progress, in which case you will be informed of this circumstance.

Information about the prosecution of the accused

If you want to, you will be informed by Police or Prosecutions in a timely manner about:

- The charges laid against the accused.
- The court process, your rights in relation to attending any trial or hearing and your role in the justice system, including as a witness for the Prosecution.
- The outcome of any bail application by the accused, and any bail conditions imposed to protect you and your family members from the accused.
- Options regarding court-ordered restitution or compensation.
- The time, date and place of any court dates.
- Any substantial changes to the charges.
- Any reasons for not laying charges, accepting a plea of guilty to a lesser charge or not prosecuting the accused.
- Where practicable, your views about accepting a plea of guilty to a lesser charge will also be sought and taken into account. The Prosecutor will make the final decision.
- The outcome of the criminal proceeding, including any sentence imposed and any conditions that are set, and what it means.
- An appeal being made, the grounds of the appeal, and the result of the appeal.
- The release or escape from custody of the accused, including before trial and when the accused is returned to custody.

Giving evidence

In particular circumstances, you may be able to object to giving evidence as a witness for the Prosecution, and have your objection decided by the Court.

Victim impact statement

If you want to, you can tell the Court about the impact of the crime on you in a victim impact statement.

There are services that can provide you with information and support to help you prepare a statement.

Restorative justice

You can participate in restorative justice options such as victim-offender conferencing, where appropriate and available as decided by the Police or court.

Return of your property

If any of your property is held by Police or Prosecutions for the investigation or evidence, your property will be returned to you at the earliest opportunity.

Information about offenders that can be provided to victims

If you are eligible to be placed on the Victims Register, you can receive various information about the offender, including:

- the offender's release date, this includes conditional release.
- the offender's security classification.
- which Correctional Centre the offender is held in and if they apply/or are transferred to another Correctional Centre.
- the dates the Parole Board considers a release on parole, conditions of parole and the revocation of parole.
- dates of release under suspended sentence, including the conditions of the suspended sentence.
- if the offender escapes, and their recapture.

The Crime Victims Services Unit can assist with your application to be placed on the Victims Register.

Financial assistance for victims of crime

If you have been the victim of a violent crime, you can make a claim for financial assistance under the Victims of Crime Assistance Act 2006 and you are entitled to have the claim determined in a timely way.

If you are a relative of the victim or a witness to a violent crime, you may be eligible to make a claim too.

Definitions

Bail

Bail allows the accused to be released into the community instead of being in custody while court proceedings are underway.

Bail can be granted by either the Police or the Court, and may be subject to certain conditions.

Restorative justice

Restorative justice generally means a process where people affected by a crime can work out issues arising from the crime together with the offender, usually helped by an impartial third party.
